Teaching Methods

Class time is a combination of classroom sessions, field exposure, and strategy development. Classroom sessions include case studies, group discussions, video clips and exercises on communication and change management in addition to lecture and discussions.

Participants will also have the opportunity of observing the counseling, volunteer training and monitoring the entire outreach activity.

They will be asked to develop outreach strategy for their own hospital, in detail: working out the need for eye care in their service area, identifying partners in the community, interaction with community partner and preparation of health education and camp awareness material in the local language.

This entire strategy will be presented at the end of the training to the course faculty for their comments and feedback.
